Opposites, Synonyms and Plurals

Parents' Notes

These spelling and vocabulary exercises are designed to increase your word power.

How to use these sheets:

When the page has 3 columns:

1. Fold the right hand column down and under so the answers are hidden from view.
2. Look at the word in the left hand column.
3. Write down its opposite/plural in the middle column. Some are quite demanding so it is unlikely that you will be able to answer all of them on the first go.
4. Unfold the right hand column and mark your work. Don't worry if the spellings are wrong at this stage. Insert your score in the 'first attempt' box.
5. Learn all those you got wrong. Learn the spellings as well. Use the Look Cover Write Check method (see below).

6. A few days later try the exercise again.
7. This time fold the right hand column back, so it covers up your first attempt answers. This creates a new blank column for your second attempt.
8. Write in the answers in this blank column, concentrating on the spelling as well.
9. Mark your work and write the score in the 'second attempt' box. Spellings must be right at this stage. It should be better than your first attempt!

Look Cover Write Check

This is the very best way to learn your spellings, and is generally used in schools. You should be familiar with learning spellings this way.

LOOK at the word and concentrate on its spelling.

COVER the word with a piece of card (or a sweet - Smarties will do nicely!)

WRITE the word on a sheet of paper, concentrating on the spelling.

CHECK the word. Tick if it is correct and eat the Smartie! ✓

Use a dictionary to look up the meanings of unfamiliar words. Use these words in speech and writing when you have the opportunity, and impress your teacher!

Solving Anagrams

Notes to help you on anagrams

The letters of a word are jumbled up so the word cannot be recognised. You must rearrange the letters to make a sensible word. To help you, you are given a clue as to what the word might be.

Example:

SLUPPI Clue - They go to school. Answer - PUPILS!

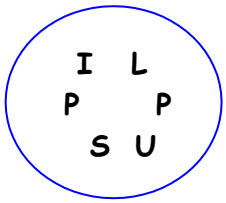
See the letters in a circles below:

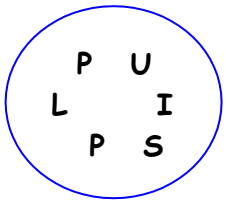
TECHNIQUE

1. Look at the clue – it is there to help you! Think about all the words that have something to do with the information you are given.

2. Keep running through these ideas, looking as you do so at the jumbled word you have in front of you.

3. Sometimes it helps to rewrite the jumbled letters in a different order in a circle. Looking at different letter combinations may trigger an idea. You can do this several times to look at different letter patterns!





4. If one of the letters is an S, look carefully to see if the clue suggests the answer is a plural (this clue does!). Then you will know the word probably ends in S.

5. Look for letter combinations such as: ch cr th ea sh ee ing pr ght

It will help if you try to remember all the anagrams you come across.
The more you know off by heart the better.

CEM Verbal Reasoning Introduction

CEM verbal reasoning is different from other forms of verbal reasoning.

1. Recently, CEM has used six core question types: comprehension, synonyms, opposites, shuffled sentences, CLOZE comprehension, and alternative word test.

2. CEM questions can, however, change without notice so no one knows what they could ask next.

3. It is likely that any new question types will focus on vocabulary/spelling/logic, however even that isn't certain.

4. We introduce you thoroughly to the six main CEM question types. We then look at other types to help you learn flexibly. These include spelling, odd word out, compound words, anagrams, crosswords, odd two out, etc.

5. CEM VR questions, including comprehension, are spread across both 45 minute papers children will face. Verbal reasoning and vocabulary account for more marks than any other discipline within CEM tests.

6. We then include several timed tests at the end.

7. We believe vocabulary development is the key to performing well in CEM Verbal Reasoning tests. We include a full vocabulary section to help children achieve their potential.

8. In some schools, a CEM VR test is used in conjunction with other non-CEM tests (Maths, Non-Verbal Reasoning etc). This course is ideal for preparing for any CEM VR test.

CHILDREN WILL ONLY SUCCEED BY WORKING THOROUGHLY AND NOT RUSHING THROUGH THE WORK.

ANY WORDS THAT ARE NOT KNOWN MUST BE ADDED TO THE PERSONAL WORDS LISTS AND REGULARLY REVISED.

CEM Verbal Reasoning Comprehension Tests

CEM comprehension tests have tended to be shorter than other 11 plus comprehension tests. They only form part of a longer 45 minute paper that will also include some VR questions, some Maths questions and some Non-Verbal Reasoning questions.

Often the CEM exam will include one comprehension text in each of the two 45 minute papers so it is vitally important that children feel comfortable dealing with comprehension work.

Often tests will be multiple-choice BUT it is important that children also learn to provide their own written answers as tests may change. It's also true that children who feel comfortable with written answers tend to do better on tests whichever format they are in.

We will be providing a mix of multiple-choice and written answer comprehensions for children. We will provide a comprehension test in each part of the course.

In terms of difficulty we provide a mix. CEM tests don't tend to be technically difficult and instead pressure children on time. We do also expose children to the most difficult forms of comprehension they may face.

Many of our comprehension tests also include sections which draw out specific vocabulary from the text. We do this as CEM may change their tests but also because it helps build vocabulary.

Remember to use your personal words list if there are any words in these comprehension tests that you feel would merit further familiarisation.

The History of Coal Mining in the UK

It is probable that the Romans used outcropping coal ('outcropping' means where the coal comes to the earth's surface or appears in exposed rock faces) when working iron or burning lime for building purposes. There is no mention of coal mining in the Domesday Book of 1086 though lead and iron mines are recorded. In the 13th century there are records of coal excavations in Durham and Northumberland, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire, Staffordshire, Lancashire, the Forest of Dean and North and South Wales. At this time coal was referred to as sea cole, a reference to coal found on the shore, washed up by the sea from cliffs or undersea outcrops in north east England. The early mines were shallow bell pits where coal was close to the surface. Shafts lined with tree trunks and branches have been found in Lancashire in workings dating from early 17th century. By 1750 brick lined shafts to 150 foot depth were common.

Industrial Revolution

Coal production increased dramatically in the 19th century as the Industrial Revolution gathered pace, as a fuel for steam engines such as the Newcomen engine, and later, the Watt steam engine. A key development was the invention, at Coalbrookdale, in the early 18th century, of coke which could be used to make pig iron in a blast furnace. The development of the steam locomotive early in the 19th century gave added impetus, and coal consumption grew rapidly as the railway network expanded through the Victorian period. Coal was widely used for domestic heating owing to its low cost and widespread availability. The manufacture of coke also provided coal gas, which could be used for heating and lighting.

Decline

By the 1960s, the coal industry was declining. In March 1968, the last pit in the Black Country closed and pit closures were a regular occurrence in many other areas. In the mid 1970s, 130 million tons of coal was being produced annually, but production started to fall below 100 million tons during the 1980s. Over the next twenty years numerous pit closures were announced as only the most economic could afford to stay in operation. By 1995 only 50 million tons of coal was produced. In January 2008 the last deep mine in South Wales closed when the coal was exhausted. Britain now has to import most of its coal.
