Compound Word Puzzle

In Verbal Reasoning compound words do not have to be traditional e.g. black and board - blackboard, but can simply be two parts of a word that have an unrelated meaning by themselves e.g. or and bit – orbit.

Often you will have to alter pronunciation to solve the puzzle e.g. pop and pies – poppies or do and me – dome.

Sometimes you will find yourself going wrong and will be left with two or more words that do not match up. There is a solution to the puzzle, just go back and adjust by using your logic skills. Some of these puzzles are difficult and will take time and high levels of concentration to solve.

Find ten compound words from these parts of words. (Use each part only once.) Write out the words you have found underneath. Learn meanings and spellings if you don't know them – this is a learning exercise, not a test.

F. Florence Rattigan's school work for marking

Sometimes, in my immagination, I wunder what it wood be like wining the lotery. If I was very ritch I could buy loads of jewllery and designer cloths and I could send out invertations to celebrites to come to a celebraition dinner in a smart hotell.

But what if no one turned up to my funxion? What would I do then. I would be very embarassed and disapointed. Maybe I will just ask a few friend's over to my house insted. I wouldnt need to win the lottery for that, and it would be more fun, don't you fink?

Odd One Out

Other publishers include this as a CEM question type although it hasn't come up so far and isn't included in briefings from CEM.

The task is to find the odd word out from a group of words. One word won't be connected to the others in the same way.

Example: bunk, mattress, hammock, cot, chair

Chair is the odd one out because while like the others it is a piece of furniture or furnishings all the others you primarily sleep on whereas a chair is primarily designed for sitting on.

Now complete these 10 questions by marking the odd one out:

1.	roast	toast	bake	scorch
2.	harsh	sad	stern	strict
3.	wire	screen	keyboard	program
4.	comrade	friend	neighbour	mate
5.	hive	set	hollow	nest
6.	cold	damp	soaking	moist
7.	link	join	attach	sever
8.	multiply	dwindle	broaden	enlarge
9.	bellow	bawl	speak	roar
10.	evolve	rotate	spin	turn

READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS CAREFULLY BEFORE STARTING.

- This short test contains a reading comprehension exercise, followed by some additional questions on spelling and punctuation mistakes.
- These are two of the question types that CEM uses in their multiple choice verbal reasoning tests.
- Try to do the test in as close to exam conditions as possible.
- The time allowance is 40 minutes. Try to spend approximately 30 minutes on the reading comprehension exercise, and 10 minutes on the spelling and punctuation mistakes.
- Work as quickly as you can throughout the paper.
- Do move on if you cannot do a question but mark it to come back to.
- As this is multiple-choice make sure you have a go at every question. If you don't have a go, you can't get a mark.

FRANKENSTEIN by Mary Shelley

Frankenstein is a story about a scientist who achieves the impossible and creates a living human being in his laboratory. In this extract, the scientist – Victor – has just brought his creature to life for the first time.

It was on a dreary night of November that I beheld the accomplishment of my toils. With an anxiety that almost amounted to agony, I collected the instruments of life around me that I might infuse a spark of being into the lifeless thing that lay at my feet. It was already one in the morning; the rain pattered dismally against the panes, and my candle was nearly burnt out, when, by the glimmer of the half-extinguished light, I saw the dull yellow eye of the creature open; it breathed hard, and a convulsive motion agitated its limbs.

How can I describe my emotions at this catastrophe, or how delineate the wretch whom with such infinite pains and care I had endeavoured to form? His limbs were in proportion, and I had selected his features as beautiful. Beautiful! Great God! His yellow skin scarcely covered the work of muscles and arteries beneath; his hair was of a lustrous black, and flowing; his teeth of a pearly whiteness; but these luxuriances only formed a more horrid contrast with his watery eyes, that seemed almost of the same colour as the dun-white sockets in which they were set, his shrivelled complexion and straight black lips.

I had worked hard for nearly two years, for the sole purpose of infusing life into an inanimate body. For this I had deprived myself of rest and health. I had desired it with an ardour that far exceeded moderation; but now that I had finished, the beauty of the dream vanished, and breathless horror and disgust filled my heart. Unable to endure the aspect of the being I had created, I rushed out of the room and continued a long time traversing my bed-chamber, unable to compose my mind to sleep. At length lassitude succeeded to the tumult I had before endured, and I threw myself on the bed in my clothes, endeavouring to seek a few moments of forgetfulness. But it was in vain; I slept, indeed, but I was disturbed by the wildest dreams.

I started from my sleep with horror; a cold dew covered my forehead, my teeth chattered, and every limb became convulsed; when, by the dim and yellow light of the moon, as it forced its way through the window shutters, I beheld the wretch—the miserable monster whom I had created. He held up the curtain of the bed; and his eyes, if eyes they may be called, were fixed on me. His jaws opened, and he muttered some inarticulate sounds, while a grin wrinkled his cheeks. He might have spoken, but I did not hear; one hand was stretched out, seemingly to detain me, but I escaped and rushed downstairs. I took refuge in the courtyard belonging to the house which I inhabited, where I remained during the rest of the night, walking up and down in the greatest agitation, listening attentively, catching and fearing each sound as if it were to announce the approach of the demoniacal corpse to which I had so miserably given life.

Morning, dismal and wet, at length dawned and discovered to my sleepless and aching eyes the church of Ingolstadt, its white steeple and clock, which indicated the sixth hour. The porter opened the gates of the court, which had that night been my asylum, and I issued into the streets, pacing them with quick steps, as if I sought to avoid the wretch whom I feared every turning of the street would present to my view. I did not dare return to the apartment which I inhabited, but felt impelled to hurry on, although drenched by the rain which poured from a black and comfortless sky.

Punctuation mistake answers

29) Humanity has only one choice left: stop burning fossil fuel. (A comma is incorrect here, a colon should be used as the phrase before it makes sense on its own)

30) Cardiff's harbour is one of the country's most spectacular. (An apostrophe is also needed in the word 'country's')

31) The two buildings' roofs and windows were damaged in the fire. (Need an apostrophe at the end of buildings' as there are two of them).

32) The country has many beautiful islands. (There should not be an apostrophe of possession)

33) "This is a lovely cake!" she exclaimed. (A capital letter must be used at the start of any passage of speech)
