CR/7

Tutankhamun

The Boy Pharaoh

Tutankhamun was an Egyptian Pharaoh and he ruled from 1332 BC to 1323 BC. He was only 9 years old when his father, Akhenaten, died. Tutankhamun was physically weak and slight of build, and we know that he was unable to walk without the aid of a cane. In his early years he relied heavily on experienced advisors from his father's reign. Tutankhamun's vizier, and eventual successor, Ay, probably made most of the important decisions during Tutankhamun's short reign.

The frail young king died suddenly, aged 19. For the next seventy days his body would have gone through the customary and careful process of mummification. First it was washed in palm oil, and then most of the internal organs were removed and placed in separate stone jars. After filling the body with linen pads and perfumed herbs and spices, it was stitched up and then covered with natron – a kind of salt. After about sixty days the salts had dried the body, and it was cleaned and carefully bound in linen bandages and smeared with resin. Then, in a solemn ceremony, the body was placed in a coffin and locked and concealed in a hidden tomb, the location of which was soon forgotten. And there it stayed for over three thousand years.

That is until 1922, when, deep in the labyrinth of tunnels of the Valley of the Kings an amazing discovery was made. Howard Carter and his team of archeologists found Tutankhamun's tomb. It is still the most complete ancient Egyptian royal tomb ever found. The news was telegraphed around the world, and overnight, 'King Tut', as the press dubbed him, was the most famous of all the Pharaohs.

This tomb contained fabulous treasures. Tutankhamun's family had obviously got the finest goldsmiths to create the golden mask for the mummy. Decorating the mummy were many artefacts - pieces of precious jewellery and shabti figures and amulets to act as lucky charms. The possessions he would need in the afterlife were also placed in the tomb. There were beautifully carved chairs, chests, chariots and statues of gods and goddesses, including two life-sized guards to protect the tomb. In one chest, protected by Anubis, the jackal- headed god of the dead, were four jars containing the Pharaoh's internal organs. Hundreds of smaller objects were also placed in the tomb including bowls of food, pots, jewellery, model boats and even dried flowers.

The tomb had been cut deep into the hillside. The coffin was taken along a passage and into the burial chamber. It was placed in a large sarcophagus which was then placed inside four golden cases fitted one inside the other. This was then sealed. The objects to be buried with Tutankhamun were placed carefully in an outer room. Finally, the tomb's entrance was sealed with a slab of rock.

No one knows how and why he died. There are several theories; that he was murdered, or fell from his hunting chariot, or had an epileptic fit or died of malaria. We will never know the truth, but certainly the treasures of the tomb of 'King Tut' will amaze people forever.
