Compound Word Puzzle

Compound words do not have to be traditional e.g. black and board - blackboard, but can be two parts of a word that have an unrelated meaning by themselves e.g. or and bit – orbit.

Often you will have to alter pronunciation to solve the puzzle e.g. pop and pies – poppies or do and me – dome.

Without using the clues , these puzzles are extremely difficult.

Find ten compound words from these parts of words. (Use each part only once.) Write out the words you have found underneath. Learn meanings and spellings if you don't know them – this is a learning exercise, not a test.

Alternative Words Cloze Exercise

This is another form of cloze exercise. In these exercises students will be given a text and within the text certain words will be missed out. Students will be given some options and will need to choose the correct word.

e.g. Students will / are / is / might be given some options and will need to choose / decide / chose / make the correct word.

TECHNIQUE:

- These exercises are designed to test comprehension ability, grammar, breadth of vocabulary and spelling.
- In each set of four words to choose from children will find the answer in addition to words which do not match as well.
- They might find homophones, misspellings, or words which aren't good use of English.
- Generally children who read a great deal and have developed a wide vocabulary and excellent spelling skills will do better in these tests.

HOW TO APPROACH THE QUESTION:

1. You should start these questions at the beginning and aim to look at two sentences at a time. You will not have time to read the whole piece before starting to work.

2. The reason we read two sentences at a time is to ensure we allow the subject matter of the piece to come through. This will help you to reach the correct answer.

3. Put a dot next to each word that you choose to be correct. Then read the two sentences again with your choices included.

4. Look out for:

- Common misspellings - normally in these cases you would see two versions of the word e.g. believe, beleive.
- Grammatical or vocabulary mistakes - often you might be faced with a choice between two words,one of which is a common grammatical fault e.g.

He bought / brought a necklace in the shop.

- Sometimes only one word will make the most sense within the piece, although two words may fit. You must choose the best option.

5. Mark as instructed those answers that you are sure of and move on. Leave any you are not sure of.

6. Once you have reached the end go back to any you have missed. Sometimes having read the full piece the missing answer may just come to you.

7. Where you are stuck go through the following process:

- Strike out any words you are SURE it cannot be.
- Often you will be left with a choice of two. These could be one correct and one misspelled word or a grammatical choice e.g. their, there, they're.
- By getting the options down as far as possible you will give yourself the best chance of making the right choice – In the end you must make a choice.

NEVER LEAVE A QUESTION UNANSWERED.

Tea

This is a cloze type exercise. Circle the most appropriate word from each selection.

Tea manufacturing (evokes / involves / imbibes / evolves) taking the (leafs / seeds / leaves / stalks) from the tea plant and (transforming / alter / cooking) (transform / changed) them into dried leaves for (brewing / baking / branding) tea.

Tea (become / became / becoming / becomes) very popular in England after 1700 and (due / cause / because / while) it (required / implied / had / did) a lot of hard work to make, it (was / wasn't / isn't) very expensive.

There are a (couple / many / range / dearth) of teas available today. Some teas are (strong / stronger / different / green) than others so if you are considering buying some tea you should (assess / think / attest / believe) which you prefer.

In many countries tea is mostly (drink / sip / drunk / boiled) without milk, but in England people often (proffer / prefer / could / try) to put milk in. Tea is the most (popular / populous / predominant / brewed) drink in the world after water.

Tip – Remember to get your tenses right. Sometimes options are given in past tense and present tense and future tense. Use the text to help you.

The Gunpowder Plot

Every November 5th, 'Guys' are burned on huge fires and amazing fireworks decorate the night sky. We all know of the infamous Gunpowder Plot of 1605 in which Guy Fawkes tried to blow up the Houses of Parliament, and King James I. But why did it happen?

Throughout the previous hundred years Britain had been disrupted by a cruel and bitter struggle between the Protestants and the Catholics. The Protestant Queen Elizabeth I had died childless. Her heir was James VI of Scotland, the son of Mary Queen of Scots, herself a Catholic, and Elizabeth's cousin. James, who was brought up a Protestant, thus became James I of England. Immediately there were Catholics scheming against him. They had expected James to be more tolerant of them. In fact, in response to this treachery, James ordered all Catholic priests, whom he considered to be behind it, to leave England. This so angered some Catholics that they came up with an audacious conspiracy to kill not only the King but also everyone sitting in the Houses of Parliament at the same time as James was there.

The occasion for this massacre was to be the State Opening of Parliament on November 5th. Guido (Guy) Fawkes and his fellow traitors, rented a house by the Houses of Parliament, and managed to get 36 barrels of gunpowder into a cellar under the House of Lords. Fawkes, the explosive expert, was in the cellars waiting to light the fuse. But at the last moment, someone had betrayed them. The guards searched the cellars and caught him red handed. Fawkes was apprehended and sent to the Tower where he was tortured and eventually gave away the names of the other conspirators. They were:

Robert Wintour,
Thomas Wintour,
Thomas Percy,
Christopher Wright,
John Wright,
Francis Tresham,
Everard Digby,
Ambrose Rookwood,
Thomas Bates,
Robert Keyes,
Hugh Owen,
John Grant and
Robert Catesby, the man who is said to have organised the whole plot.

Sir William Wade, Lieutenant of the Tower, had orders to use whatever means of torture was required to get information from Fawkes. This order came from James I, who was appalled that the plot had so nearly destroyed himself and his parliament.

Of those implicated, Percy, Catesby, and several others were shot when their Staffordshire hideout was surrounded by soldiers. The rest were captured, and after a brief trial, they were hung, drawn and quartered, with Fawkes, in January 1606.
