Synonyms Technique Guidance and Introduction

These tests are difficult because you have no contextual clues to help you. There are no special techniques which can help you other than working ACTIVELY. Please do not just stare at the word, work actively.

Synonyms Test Version 1

Complete the word on the right so that is has a similar meaning to the word on the left.

Example question:

CUNNING CL _ _ ER

As you have no context, try to think about what the word means. You could think about a sentence that contains the word to help you. 'The cunning fox found a hole in the fence.' If nothing comes to mind then you could try and add letters to see if that might help. CLE _ ER → The answer is CLEVER. Remember don't just stare at the word – work actively.

Synonyms Test Version 2

The second type of synonyms question puts a word on the left and then asks you to find the most similar word from four options.

Example Question:

CURB finish control pavement release

The technique points to think about are:

1. Don't leap to the answer, you are looking for the most similar word and the question may deliberately include opposites (Attack – Defend) or word association tricks (Run – Fast) which are easy to leap at without thinking.

CURB is a homophone. One of its meanings is related to pavement (a curb can mean the edge of the road), but related meanings are not similar. Release actually has an obvious opposite meaning to CURB whereas control has a similar meaning. The answer therefore is control, which has the most similar meaning to CURB.

2. Watch out for misspelt words or homophones. Sometimes you could find two options such as:

STATIC moveable stationary solid stationery

In this case the answer is clearly stationary (not stationery).

3. There will be cases where you may not know the meanings of all the words. In these cases use your common sense to exclude options you know are incorrect such as:

WISE experienced foolhardy sagacious thoughtful

You may not know what sagacious means but you might know that thoughtful and experienced aren't really similar to wise and you may have a feeling that foolhardy means foolish. This would mean that a good educated guess might be that sagacious is closest in meaning to wise, even if you have never seen the word before.

St. Patrick

Born in Wales at the end of the 4th century, Patrick was a fortunate child. His parents were wealthy and he lived a comfortable early life.
However, when he was sixteen years old, Patrick was captured by Irish raiders who were attacking his family estate. They transported him to Ireland where he spent six years in captivity. Frightened and homesick, he was forced to work as a shepherd. This was a hard and lonely life so he turned to religion for solace, becoming a devout Christian. He wished he could persuade the Irish to adopt his religion, but at the time, most of them believed in pagan gods and magic. Finally, Patrick escaped, walking two hundred miles to the coast from County Mayo where he had been held.
He settled in Wales, but in a vision he was urged by voices to return to Ireland as a Christian missionary. He began a long course of religious study that was to take 15 years during which he was ordained as a priest.
Eventually he was told to go to Ireland to fulfil two tasks - to minister to the Christians there and to persuade the Irish pagans to become Christians. He met the King and challenged him to give up the old gods and become a Christian. The King was impressed by Patrick's skilful arguments and eventually became a Christian, much to Patrick's delight.
Patrick became a bishop and spent the rest of his life in Ireland, converting people to Christianity and building churches.

The Irish people now look upon Patrick as their patron saint. St Patrick's Day is celebrated on 17th March, when many people wear something green and display the national plant of Ireland – the shamrock, a small three leafed clover.
